

A Work In-Progress

Growth, the word brings with it thought of a continuing increase of size and proportion. Considering the growth of living things, it's hard to name something that doesn't grow. When the seed of a plant falls to the earth, it germinates and begins to grow. When animals give birth to offspring, the growth process begins immediately. When a child is born, the baby starts a journey of growth and maturity.

In the spiritual realm, growth is both necessary and required. Once we experience spiritual rebirth through the Gospel, we are to desire the "pure milk of the word" so to grow from it. (1 Peter 2:2). Spiritual growth should encompass our whole being, both physical and emotional. The Apostle Peter encouraged his readers to develop and grow traits commonly known as the "Christian Graces." (2 Peter 1:5-7) Faith, virtue (goodness), knowledge, self-control, perseverance, godliness, brotherly kindness, and love are to be diligently added to our character. Peter goes on to say that if we possess these characteristics and continue to increase them, we are bearing fruit for the Lord and will not be considered barren or useless.

Now if you think about it, a fruit bearing plant doesn't produce all its fruit in just one day and then it's done. No, it will continue yielding fruit throughout the growing season. Applying the metaphor to ourselves, we won't develop all of the Christian graces right away and then be completely mature. Rather, with the Lord's help, we must work at growing ourselves throughout the entire season of our lives. Yes, we are a work in-progress, ever maturing but never matured until we meet the Savior in eternity.

We can't leave the subject without a warning. As we first mentioned, all things grow. Well, not all. There are conditions and diseases that prohibit living things from growing and lead to an early death. Peter said those who lack the Christian graces are shortsighted, blind, and have forgotten about their salvation. (2 Peter 1:9). So let us be diligent to add these graces to our character, never stumbling, finding ourselves in the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. (2 Peter 1:11).
