The following 17th Century prayer was found in an old English church.

Lord, you know better than I know myself that I am growing older and one day will be old. Keep me from the fatal habit of thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion.

Release me from craving to straighten out everybody's affairs. Make me thoughtful but not moody, helpful but not bossy. With my vast store of wisdom it seems a pity not to use it all; but you know, Lord, that I want a few friends at the end.

Keep my mind free from the recital of endless details, give me wings to get to the point.

Seal my lips on my aches and pains, they are increasing and love of rehearsing them is becoming sweeter as the years go by. I dare not ask for grace enough to enjoy the tales of other's pains, but help me to endure them with patience.

I dare not ask for improved memory, but for growing humility and a lessening cocksureness when my memory seems to clash with the memories of others. Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionally I may be mistaken.

Keep me reasonably sweet; I do not want to be a saint, some of them are so hard to live with, but a sour old person is one of the crowning works of the devil.

Give me the ability to see good things in unexpected places and talent in unexpected people, and give me, O Lord, the grace to tell them so. AMEN

Old age is like everything else. To make a success of it, you've got to start young. - Fred Astaire

Have You Tried These?

A little more patience — To overlook and bear up with the things others do and say that irritate me?

A little more firmness — To continue the work which duty demands and which is often repellent to me?

A little more humility — To remain at the post at which I find myself which does not fit in at all with my hopes and dreams?

A little more common sense — To take people as they are and not as I should like them to be?

A little more prudence — To bother as little as possible about other people's affairs?

A little more cheerfulness — So as not to show that I have been hurt?

A little more unselfishness — In trying to understand the thoughts and feelings of others?

Above all — a little more prayer — To draw God to my heart?
